The current configuration and space requirements, both in the administrative and operational spaces, are grossly inadequate. RIEMA employees are spread-out in four physically separate locations; the JFHQ main office building and Scofield Barracks (separate from the JFHQ) in Cranston, the basement of the Statehouse in Providence and the Rhode Island State Police (RISP) Warehouse in Scituate, RI. The current square footage at JFHQ does not allow for either the consolidation of RIEMA staff nor expansion of additional office space, hampering the Agency's mission to keep the public safe during emergency events. Work areas in Schofield are elevated above ground level, and pose a significant risk that personnel can be trapped during a fire or shooting event for instance, because there is no alternative means of egress. Although currently unoccupied, RIEMA has a temporary double-wide trailer/mobile home used for overflow during an Emergency Operations Center (EOC) activation; the trailer is located in the parking lot of JFHQ. During a severe weather event, such as a hurricane or a winter nor'easter, the trailer is unsafe for staff to occupy.

The SEOC, currently located in JFHQ, is only large enough to accommodate one person per State Emergency Support Function. There is no additional room to accommodate other state personnel or any Federal or local government, private sector or non-profit organization personnel, again, hampering any State-wide emergency response. Additionally, other State Intelligence and Operations Centers such as the State Fusion Center, Department of Health EOC and the Department of Transportation's Traffic Management Center (DOT TMC) are located elsewhere in the State; making effective and consistent coordination difficult. The space in the sub-basement of the Statehouse is used to calibrate radiological instruments, and was never intended for this use.

The agency is taking considerable steps in this direction, but it is on an informal, branch directive basis rather than a formal agency-wide basis at this point. - rarely able to meet goals, constant management by crisis

Most senior managers have been in place for less than 2 years, with 2 different Directors and changing goals and operating conditions during that time. The nature of emergency management is training, equipping and coordinating other entities within the State, to respond during natural and man-made disaster events, without loss of life and minimal damage to property. The past year has seen a systematic approach to identifying mission objectives and the means to measure and achieve them. The agency is in the process of codifying all related plans, policies and procedures to enhance its ability to meet or exceed all major strategic goals and achieve national accreditation.
